Rainer Maria Rilke said, “Live the questions.” Join Nate over Zoom for an hour of reading, discussion, and a little writing (if time allows). We’ll start by looking at a few poems (by Elizabeth Bishop, Robert Hayden, and others), all of which contain at least one question. We’ll follow the poems’ invitations into asking big questions of our world and ourselves, but we will also find solace, and even energy, in the kinds of questioning that poems can open up. No poetry experience necessary.
